This building, located at 907 Central Ave (also known as Hwy 36). It was built in 1900 and is one of the few buildings on this block to have only one story.

The front of the building has two entrances, which is due to the building once being split between multiple businesses. Currently, only one business occupies the space. The façade has been altered and only retains some of the original brick work.

This building shares walls with the buildings on both the east and west sides.

The interior has been converted to office space.

Since its construction in 1900, this building has been a part of the downtown business area of Auburn. For the last 113 years, several businesses have occupied the space and served the community of Auburn and the surrounding rural area.

Known businesses that have occupied this space include F&H Sandwich shop (1930) and Briar's Coffee Shop (1950s). One-half of the building was long occupied by Fred Bosshammer's tailoring shop.
